

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

[illegible]

they are afflicted with stone or gravel, or with the disease of the gall bladder, the gall stones, the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, the stomach, or the intestines, the patient should be treated in the proper directions, and the Ointment should be applied to the affected parts. The Ointment is a powerful remedy, and will cure all the above diseases. This treatment will give almost immediate relief after all other means have failed.

Stomach out of Order.

No medicine will so effectually improve the tone of the stomach as these Pills; they remove all acidity, and give either a healthy or a purgative effect. They reach the liver, and reduce the bile to its normal condition. In cases of spasms—in fact they are wonderfully efficacious in all the disorders of the liver and stomach.

Coughs and Colds.

These Pills are the best remedy for Coughs and Colds, when attended with the rheumatism of the chest. The symptoms of disordered action may allways be removed by the use of these Pills. They will quickly remedy any temporary stagnation of the lungs, and will remove the inflammation of the air-passages, and enable the vessels, moderate the lungs to perform their functions with ease and regularity.

Debilitated Constitutions
 In cases of debility, languor, and nervousness generated by excess of any kind, whether mental or physical, the diet should be such as to gradually increase the vitality, and restore the system to its normal condition. The food should be such as to re-establish the digestive system, and thus to brace the nervous system, raise the patient's spirits, and bring back the frame to its primitive health and vigor.

Billowness, Loss of Appetite, Headache, and Lowness of Spirits.
 These Pills exert a very beneficial change in debilitated constitutions, and are especially useful in cases of indigestion, loss of appetite, headache, and lowness of spirits. They remove excess of bile, and increase the digestive, head, and palpitant of the heart.

Holman's Pills are the best remedy known in all cases of the following disorders:

THE BRITISH COLONIST

Monday Morning, July 24, 1865.

To Advertisers and the Public.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST, published every morning (Sundays excepted), is the largest and most widely circulated journal in the West. Its circulation is estimated at 10,000 copies. It is published at the residence of the Proprietor, at the corner of the Main and Front Streets, Victoria, B.C.

THE WEEKLY BRITISH COLONIST, published every Tuesday, will be mailed or left at the residence of the Proprietor, ready for mailing, at 50 cents per week, payable to the carrier.

JOB PRINTING.

THE BRITISH COLONIST has a large addition to their stock of new and beautiful jobbing type, which will be set in any style with neatness and despatch, at a slight advance on San Francisco prices.

THE NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

In our last issue we alluded to the disheartening circumstance of the almost total cessation of Canadian immigration. The subject is one with which our interests are more closely interwoven than is generally considered by the inhabitants of Vancouver Island and British Columbia; for it is quite evident when we examine our position carefully, that it is to Canada more than to England we shall be obliged for years to come to depend for a British immigration. Anything, therefore, that curbs the influx to the Eastern Provinces must, in the natural course of things, act on us. The schemes put forward by Canadian statesmen as remedial projects are matters of no small interest to these colonies, and will have no insignificant bearing on their destiny. Two great remedies are brought forward by the rival classes of politicians—the one to develop by colonization roads the vast extent of territory already under the Canadian government, and to make the land laws more liberal, and the other to open up the Far West. The first aims at, besides other things, a homestead measure similar to that in existence in the neighboring republic, and the latter at opening up a highway to the Red River and Saskatchewan valleys. The true policy will probably be to combine both schemes.

There is certainly no earthly reason why two hundred thousand British subjects should be added yearly to a foreign power, while British colonies are languishing for want of population. Yet we find the most important of these colonies crying out not only for immigration but for something to stop the emigration that is leaving its shores for the adjoining Republic. From 1860 to 1863 inclusive, Canada spent nearly $200,000 on immigration, or on the average $50,000 a year; yet the fruits of the expenditure are to-day scarcely discernible. The lesson should not be lost on us, whose position is analogous in more ways than one to our Eastern fellow-colonists. Fifty thousand dollars a year is a small sum, to be sure, for a new country of three millions of a population to spend in bringing immigrants to its shores—the Australian colonies, with about one-third the inhabitants, have spent fifteen times the amount—still it is too large a sum to be thrown away. Had the ingenuity of Canada been exercised more in providing means to attract the emigrant from Great Britain—had the energy of the country been devoted more to those pathways that led to such successful results in the adjoining Republic, there would have been no cry to-day about the numbers leaving the country. It may be true, as the Toronto Leader asserts, that the cause of this unprofitable state of affairs is to be found in the unfavorable contrast which the Canadian land system presents to the system in vogue in the United States or it may be true, according to the Toronto Globe, that the Western States are blessed with a greater extent of prairie land than is to be met with in Canada; one thing however is certain, unless equal attractions can be laid before the European emigrant, Canada is bound to lose instead of gain by the future. "The only possible competition," says the Globe, which British North America can set up, "is by opening up a highway to our own fertile prairies in the Red River and Saskatchewan valleys. We have there a region exactly similar to Illinois and Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota. If we had a good road into that district, and could open it to colonization, we would not have the mortification of seeing thousands every year pass by us. It seems but as yesterday when Ohio, Indiana and Michigan were regarded as the western limits of civilization. Since then Illinois and Wisconsin have sprung into existence, and still later, Iowa and Minnesota. The process is going rapidly forward. Dakota has recently been declared a 'territory' of the Union, and it will no doubt soon take rank as a 'state.' Then look to Kansas and Nebraska, Nevada and Utah. Where, ten years ago, primeval solitude was only disturbed by the tramp of the red man, hundreds of thousands of civilized inhabitants are now settled, and the din of commerce commingles with the hum of other arts and appliances of civilization."

During the late session of the Canadian Parliament the Confederation scheme absorbed immigration and all other projects for benefiting the country; but it will be found that even Confederation will not attain the great end which is sought unless it is supplemented by a land policy that will at least present as many advantages to the intending emigrant as the system in the States. If Upper Canada is to be the "Far West" of the adventurous—the rolling prairie with the firmament between Lake Superior and the Rocky Mountains are to continue "tabooed" through the want of communication with the British Provinces east, all the Confederation schemes in the world won't arrest or at least divert for a moment the tide of emigration to the States. It is to the opening up of a great highway towards the Pacific and to free grants of land to actual settlers, that the British portion of the North American continent has any prospect of being peopled up. The Confederation scheme made the first necessity a cardinal principle in its programme, but it is evident the Government of Canada has yet much to learn and much to relinquish on the land question. The same may indeed be said of the British colonies on this continent, must in spite of ourselves adopt the same principle, and count every man, woman and child as a potential settler, that the British portion of the North American continent has any prospect of being peopled up.

No man will walk a mile to get an article he can get as good and as cheap at fifty, and we can never hope, outside our gold mines, to attract a population, unless we can prove conclusively that we are giving the highest price for the immigrant. Not only, however, must our land policy be exceedingly liberal one, but every measure for the safety and comfort of the inhabitants will have to be adopted. The bills which were thrown out of the Upper House, and which aimed at engraving on our colonial jurisprudence many of those wise provisions which have worked so successfully in America, will have to become the laws of the land, even if the inhabitants are obliged to resort to extremities. Vancouver Island cannot, in fact, any more than Canada, afford to be one whit less liberal than the United States.
